Moclinejo, a white village in Axarquía... full of color...

Moclinejo is a village that mainly cultivates Moscatel grapes. It produces wine and also the famous raisin (DO Málaga raisin) like the other towns on the Ruta de la Pasa. This grape variety is precisely Moscatel de Alejandría. It has been cultivated in these lands for thousands of years. It was imported from Egypt by the Phoenicians 3000 years ago. It has always been cultivated in the surrounding mountains, with the only tool being the human hand and the help of mules for the harvest.

Walking through the narrow streets of Moclinejo is charming. After the walk, the best thing is to stop for a drink in the town square.
